What was the first thing that went through your mind when you realized your competitor made Team Canada?

A sense of satisfaction that the effort she put in made her successful at nationals, but there is a long road ahead to be ready for worlds.

What made you want to train competitors for Skills Competitions?

The reason I wanted to train competitors is because I am able to witness the competitors in their growth. Their skill level increases dramatically through the competition cycle, and the reward is seeing the joy in the competitor.

What do you think sets your competitor apart from the others in their skill area?

Our competitor was at a high standard prior to joining the Skills competition, so she will only continue to improve.

What are you most excited to experience in Lyon, France?

A great competition and to be able to learn from all the different ideas and skills the competitors will display as they compete.
